SITES MAY ADD 2000 ACRES OF FINE CANE LAND

Locations for Flood-Storage Reservoirs on Kauai Looked at By Hydrographer

Two thousand acres of cane land will be added to the area now being cultivated on Kauai, if flood storage reservoirs, the sites for which have just been located on that island by Territorial Hydrographer G. K. Larrison, can be constructed.

When seen today by a Star-Bulletin reporter Larrison said that as a result of investigations he has just completed in the upper North Waialua, Kapa, and Anahola valleys a number of possible flood-storage reservoir sites have been examined, and that an appropriation will be asked of the next legislature for detailed surveys. "From the preliminary investigation it is estimated that storage for sufficient flood-water can be obtained to add about 2000 acres of cane land to that now being cultivated in these valleys," he stated today.

"In August a similar investigation will be made on the headwaters of the Waimea river, Kauai, to last about two weeks, I will be assisted there by W. V. Hardy, our engineer in charge of the Kauai water investigation, who assisted me with the flood-storage reservoir sites investigation we have just finished."

The territorial hydrographer spoke enthusiastically of the recent Fourth of July celebration at Lihue, and said the greatest crowd seen there in civilized times assembled to watch the events. Governor Pinkham, he added, gave a dinner to the 48 officers of the 4th Infantry, N. G. H., also 32 prominent civilians of Kauai, the night of July 6.

THEATRICAL OFFERINGS CLEVER ACTRESS IN BIG DRAMA

Strange roles are always chosen by Wm. Fox as a means of presenting to the photo-drama loving public the big drawing card of the Fox Film Corporation, Theda Bara. "Sin," the present offering at the Hawaii theater, and one that is packing the Hotel street theater to the doors, is easily classed as strange. It shows the possible complexities of a woman's nature. One moment she is willing to sacrifice her all for the man who will steal for her the jewels from the breast of the Madonna of Mt. Carmel, while the next, after the jewels have been stolen and laid at her feet, she hates the man who is the thief.

Theda Bara has previously been seen in a "mad scene," and those who follow the offerings at the Hawaii know just how good she was in this part. In "Sin," she finally goes mad and her work is classical. As is usual with this class of film the ending is far from "they lived happy ever after" variety.

"The Master Key" is a genuine thriller in the form of a serial. The action is fast and furious and leaves the audience on the tip of expectation as the chapter closes.

C. CHAPLIN IS TWICE ON BILL

Patrons of the Bijou summer season of photo-plays are enjoying a hearty laugh during the present week with "Green Stockings," the feature film, and Charlie Chaplin on the bill in a couple of comedies. It is rarely that an audience is permitted to see Chaplin perform twice in the same evening, but the management of the Bijou is generous, this week anyway, and this leading comedian of all the film stars appears in "Between Showers" and "The Masqueraders."

"Green Stockings" is a faithful picture of the popular stage play of the same name which created such a furore when first presented. It is a charming comedy based on an old English custom of dressing the eldest daughter of a family in green hosiery at the wedding of her younger sister, in order that all might know that she was still a spinster. In this case one pair of green stockings has been worn and there is prospect of another when the eldest daughter in question evolves a scheme that she figures will let her out.

As the result of the young lady's deception there is presented a series of circumstances that are ludicrously funny. However, the ending is perfect.

MARK TWAIN IS HERE IN FILMS

Mark Twain's works promise to live just so long as the English language endures and to be widely read and enjoyed during that entire period. There are possibly a few persons who read the English language who have never read Twain's works, but that few will no longer have an excuse for not being acquainted with the immortal American humorist. Mark Twain has been dramatized. At least his works have and they are being released through Paramount Pictures, the first, "Pudd'nhead Wilson," coming to the Liberty theater tonight with Theodore Roberts in the name part. It seems almost a sacrilege to tell anything of the story of "Pudd'nhead Wilson," as everyone should have read of the great Southern lawyer who is credited with employing the finger-print system of identification of criminals. There should be some tense scenes in the picture of this work, also some tender ones as the love story which Twain knew so well how to thread through his of ferings is one of deepest sympathy.

"The Broken Coin" will be continued with the feature film as the serial attraction.
